On March 26, the Vermont Historical Society and the Vermont Commission on Women will present a program titled "Vermont Women in Journalism." This program, part of our ongoing series of discussions celebrating women's history month (March), will share the thoughts, perspectives and stories of accomplished women from all walks of life and from all types of media who have chosen journalism as a career.

Our distinguished panelists will share experiences and participate in a conversation about challenges faced by women journalists yesterday, today, and into the future. The event begins with an introduction by Marilyn Blackwell, independent scholar, giving an overview of women journalists across the history of Vermont. Our panel moderator is Rickey Gard Diamond, editor of Vermont Woman, and our panelists are Anne Galloway, editor and founder of vtdigger.org; Kristin Carlson of WCAX, Channel 3; Nina Keck of Vermont Public Radio; and Terri Hallenbeck of the Burlington Free Press.

The panel discussion will take place on Tuesday, March 26, from noon – 1:30 p.m. at the Vermont History Museum, at 109 State Street in Montpelier. We encourage attendees to bring a bagged lunch, and will be providing beverages and dessert.

To RSVP (requested), please contact Lilly Talbert, Communications and Program Coordinator for the Vermont Commission on Women at Lilly.Talbert@state.vt.us or 802-828-2841.

Event sponsors include: Black River Design, Burlington Free Press, Cabot Creamery, Clute Wealth Management, Vermont Association of Broadcasters, Key Bank, Northfield Savings Bank, and WCAX.

8th Annual Dismantling Rape Culture Conference
Thursday, April 11, 8:00 AM - 4:30 PM
Dudley H. Davis Center, UVM Campus

This year, the keynote speaker is Vednita Carter, Founder and Executive Director of Breaking Free, a Minnesota-based non-profit and social justice/social change organization. Every year, Breaking Free helps an average of 400-500 women and girls escape systems of prostitution and sexual exploitation through advocacy, direct services, housing, and education. Vednita Carter is an author, sought-after speaker and trainer, an award-winning pioneer in the abolitionist movement. She has extensive experience in developing and planning programs for sex trafficked women and girls.

The conference is free for current UVM affiliates and students from all Vermont colleges and universities. There is a $20 fee for community members. Come for the full day or a portion of the conference. Register: <http://www.surveymonkey.com/s/2013drccreg>. More info: Sarah Warrington at 802-656-2925 or sarah.warrington@uvm.edu

Mothers in Academia

Vermont-based professor Kirsten Isgro co-edited this newly released book of essays from Columbia University Press. Description: Featuring forthright testimonials by women who are or have been mothers as undergraduates, graduate students, academic staff, administrators, and professors, this volume intimately portrays the experiences of women at various stages of motherhood while theoretically and empirically considering the conditions of working motherhood as academic life has become more laborious. As higher learning institutions move toward more corporate-based models of teaching, the immense structural and cultural changes are transforming women's academic lives and, by extension, their families. The Vermont Human Trafficking Task Force is in the process of collecting important data concerning the identification of instances of human trafficking in Vermont. If you are a service provider or work with individuals who may be experiencing this, please take a few minutes to complete this survey and help build a resource list of organizations that can offer services to victims of human trafficking and enable the Task Force to discover the scope of trafficking within our state. If you have questions/comments about this survey please contact Courtney Schaad at Give Way to Freedom; email: courtney@givewaytofreedom.org. If you want to contact a member of the Vermont Human Trafficking Task Force, please contact Barbara Whitchurch at the Vermont Center for Crime Victim Services at (802) 241-1250 x 112 or email; barbara.whitchurch@ccvs.state.vt.us Please take a few minutes and complete this short survey by March 8th.
